

Olga Vitek,Phd: Dr. Olga Vitek holds a PhD in Statistics from Purdue University. She is Professor in the Khoury College of Computer Sciences at Northeastern University, and was previously a Faculty and a University Faculty Scholar at Purdue. Her research intersects statistical science, machine learning, mass spectrometry and systems biology. Statistical methods and open-source software MSstats and Cardinal developed in her lab are widely used in academia and industry. Dr. Vitek is a Senior Member of the International Society for Computational Biology, and President-elect of the Boston Chapter of the American Statistical Association. She serves on the Editorial advisory board of Molecular and Cellular Proteomics and of Journal of Proteome Research.